

To be culturally competent is to learn about other cultures so that your interactions are well-informed.
But is it even possible to learn everything about other cultures and become completely bias-free?
That's where cultural humility comes in. To be culturally humble is to be aware of our limitations.

